The New Trend in Primary Care: Screening for STIs

Narrator:

Just how much of a threat are STIs to our female patients? The numbers may surprise you.

9 million women have an STI, and 13,000 are diagnosed with cervical cancer each year.

But what's even more worrisome?

Fewer women are seeing their OB/GYN, putting them at an increased risk of undetected health threats.

Learn how your primary care practice can make a difference for these women at www.ReachMD.com/WomensHealthUpdate.
